

Students from Picton School gave a talk to the school Kaitiaki on the information they gained from their kauri dieback study. They also planted some kauri seeds for future generations to see and enjoy. This has also led to new learning about the importance of keeping the soil healthy to grow their plants and they are now reviewing school systems and learning more about the school worm farm. Also pictured is some kauri inspired artwork.

